Prison Officials.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—A preliminary hearing of the Louis H. Boardman against the Call for the alleged libel of Gage, in connection with the Quentin prison frauds, came startling and rather unlooked for in Judge Fritz's court.

After an adjournment weeks, the hearing of the case resumed this afternoon. Campbell for the defense asserted that the defense, after endeavors to obtain testimony from the officials of the prison, had determined to submit its case at this time. The further introduction of testimony by the defense, the officials of the prison had repeatedly refused to answer the summons of the court, and had frustrated the

Mr. Witing was interrupted by the court, who stated that, in his opinion, no rebuttal was required. The court stated that while the Call had abundantly shown great irregularities and corruption in the conduct of the trial at San Quentin, it had not shown a defense sufficiently connected with the case to warrant a reversal of the verdict. The court stated that the corrupt practices existing at San Quentin to warrant a decision in favor of the defense, and, as he had said at the opening of the case, the state of the proof against Gov. Gage was absolute, he would have to pass the matter up to a higher court.

HAINES HANGED.
CULPRIT LOST HIS NERVE
[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
SACRAMENTO, Sept. 28.—A dispatch to the Bee this morning gives the following account of the execution at Folsom prison today: Frank M. Haines was hanged this morning for the murder of Jerry Brown, a fellow-convict, at San Quentin prison last winter. The drop fell five minutes after 10 o'clock, and the neck was broken instantly. The man struggled and uttered a few words.

in three minutes. In three minutes Haines was pronounced dead. The autopsy, which immediately followed, developed that the neck had been broken.

The condemned man seemed to have no nerve as the time for the execution approached, although he was seen to call at an early hour this morning that he intended to attempt a vicious assault on Capt. R. J. Murphy, Capt. McQuinn and the condemned man's cell mates if he might supply him with a knife. As the door was swung open to take out Haines, he was conscious of his presence, however, and he hid behind the door, with hands raised, and upraised, Haines was prepared to deliver him a blow on the head if he prevented, however, in this attempt.

Haines would not listen to the appeals of the death warrant, although

PATCHED-UP CHARTER GOES TO ENGRASSER.

WITH a few slaps and bangs and three hours of feverish discussion of the scores of odds and ends, the Charter Revision Committee and the Committee on Revision of the Charter Revision Committee wound up the revising of the city's organic law at 11 o'clock last night.

On motion of Walter Hays the multitudinous type-written sheets forming the reports of the sub-committees on various departments were ordered to be put in the proper form and order, numbered and engrossed. This makes a complete set of the charter.

The City Attorney will submit the proposed new charter, in its complete and perfected form, to the whole Revision Committee at its final meeting, which will be held in the Council Chamber next morning at 10 o'clock. At this meeting the committee will make its formal approval of the engrossed copy of the amended charter, and later in the day it will go before the Council for its approval and the passing of the necessary ordinance providing for its submission to the people at the election.

It was anticipated that last night's meeting would be the last of the committee and that the work to be performed would be merely unimportant clerical compilation and correction. The evening was devoted principally to the harmonizing of various conflicting amendments and the settlement of miscellaneous matters that had caused final settlements. The committee was about ready to adjourn sine die, when Joseph Scott sprang a question that was instantly seen to be one of the most important with which the committee has been called upon to deal, and this prolonged the proceedings for over an hour.

Mr. Scott's eleventh-hour surprise was in the form of a motion that the proposed amendments be framed so as to go into effect on the first of Monday, January, 1903. He argued that if they should go into effect later, they would be of no use to the people and ratification by the Legislature would upset the municipal government.

The card for tomorrow will consist of ten sheets at fifteen cents, a five-man team which at twenty-five cents for the club trophy, a merchandise show and a two-man team shot at twenty-five cents for the club's smokeless powder cup.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

FOREWORD.

Our lessons for three months have followed Israel from the Red Sea to the promised land. You have covered a period of nearly forty years and seen them in their many moods and their varying experiences. We have seen the hand of God, but chiefly we have seen the hand of man. We have seen the hand of God, but chiefly we have seen the hand of man. We have seen the hand of God, but chiefly we have seen the hand of man.

MOSES' ACHIEVEMENTS.

(1.) He was the means of securing for them. Exodus xvi, 1-15. It was not given to order to keep them from murmuring, but to supply a felt want. They had done nothing but murmur since they had left Egypt. Moses, six weeks before, although he had done what they wanted him to do, and God had shown him power to keep and his loving care all the time. Now, instead of praying they murmured and he had to take them as if they were praying. The answer is from God, but through Moses. He accompanied them with such a Father as God; fortunate that they have such a friend as Moses. He accompanied them with such a Father as God; fortunate that they have such a friend as Moses. He accompanied them with such a Father as God; fortunate that they have such a friend as Moses.

(2.) He brought them out of Egypt. They have gotten over as far as Mt. Sinai and there God gives the law. It comes from God, but through Moses. He comes from one who has already shown them marked kindness, and through one who had been to God in his kindness. They had lived among a nation of people who worshipped many gods, and were surrounded by such people and would find them everywhere. Moses teaches them there is in reality only one God, and that he is a God who is to be worshipped by people using physical representations of their gods. Moses tells them that God forbids it. There is to be no such representation of God, nor worship images of men or beasts. God will not divide his worship with another, for that would degrade them as well as Him.

Now are they to dishonor God by taking His name in vain. There were and are several ways of doing it. They took God's name in vain when they used it in connection with any assertions to impress others that they were true. The heathen, surrounded in frenzy to God to attest that they spoke truth, and the Jews, did it too. Jesus corrected them for it, and Paul told them that when they said "yes" or "no," it should mean "yes" or "no." Their word must be as good as their bond, as we would say.

They took God's name in vain when they did not regard themselves as under obligation to keep their word unless it was supported by a freeman's appeal to God as witness.

They took God's name in vain when they cursed and swore. The world's lawgiver and benefactor.

(3.) He brought commandments from God to show them how to live. Life begins in the home. That is, where duty begins. How to live, that duty is of first importance. Moses tells us, Duty to parents is next to our duty to God for they are in God's place for us; they are wiser than we. They have done so much for us. The duty of children to their parents shows their capacity for faith in God. Obedience to parents makes obedience to God easier. We honor our parents when we are obedient, confident, courteous, dutiful to them in their helplessness and want, and when we become the kind of people they wished and prayed and hoped for.

There is a special promise given to those who do it.

Life begins in the home, is continued in the family, and there we are told to love. Love for others as for ourselves. He will reward them who are faithful to the law he will keep all the commandments relating to his fellow-men. He will reward them who are faithful to the law he will keep all the commandments relating to his fellow-men. He will reward them who are faithful to the law he will keep all the commandments relating to his fellow-men.

(4.) He restores them to God after an awful act of idolatry. In making gods and worshipping them. Exodus xxii, 14, 20-25.

We wonder why they did it. After such proof that God alone is God, and after such fruits of idolatry as they saw in Egypt. We wonder that Aaron permitted it. They were children, patient, vacillating, sensual. Aaron was weak, however we may explain his action. We would not have been surprised if Moses had washed his hands of them and gone back, but he interceded with God in great agony and unselfishness and received from the hand of God other tables containing the commandments to replace those he had thrown down and broken in anger.

(5.) He provides a place where their representatives can meet God, to offer intercession through sacrifices and prayers, and to receive communications from Him. Exodus xl, 1-12.

The tabernacle was a movable tent that not only served as a place where the priests could meet God, but as a symbol of Christ, the true meeting place of God and man. It was a beautiful material in which the value of the Christian virtues. To approach that tabernacle, the priest saw his uncleanliness, the mirror cleaned himself in the basin and offered sacrifices for sin. Thus must the sinner do who meets God in peace.

(6.) He executes God's righteous judgment on two prominent priests, Nadab and Abihu. Leviticus x, 1-15.

Those young men did what God told them to do, but in a wrong way. They were told to offer incense, with a certain fire, but they got the fire from an other place, from the fire at which the priests cooked their food. Instead of offering incense, they offered fire. The reason they did it was that they were drunk, for their sin and punishment were by right of law. Their death was deserved, and it was needed for their own sakes and for the sake of the nation.

(7.) He leads them on toward Canaan. Numbers x, 11-12, 29-34.

Though God's word is a true leader, and the pillar of cloud and of fire was the symbol of His presence and the signal of His purposes, yet Moses was representative to give all direc-
